

Contents

Acknowledgements	page vii
Introduction: The Enlightenment and modernity	1
The rationale of this book	1
The structure of this book	7
1 The myth of Enlightenment deism	11
The myth of the deist movement	11
The deism myth and modern historians	22
The myth and the historical record	30
The myth and the construction of modernity	37
2 Historians, religion and the historical record	45
The origins of Enlightenment anticlericalism	45
John Toland, Pierre Bayle and the problem of influence	52
Enlightenment from within or without Christianity?	57
The elite and the written record	62
Scaremongering, public opinion and the construction of the deism scare	68
3 The English deist movement: a case study in the construction of a myth	81
Post-Restoration context	81
Deists and Dissent confused	87
John Toland and Christianity not Mysterious	94
Early modern politico-religious propagandists and modern historians	102
Dissent and Enlightenment	121

Contents

4	France: the revolt of democratic Christianity and the rise of public opinion	130
	Bourbons, Huguenots and Jansenists	131
	The Nouvelles ecclésiastiques and Bourbon miscalculation	136
	The revolt of the 1750s	144
	Popular victory against the Jesuits and the call for toleration	150
	The final decline of the absolutist dream	159
5	Italy: Roman 'tyranny' and radical Catholic opposition	168
	Jansenism and Catholic Enlightenment	168
	Anti-curial polemic and its context	171
	Regalism and Jansenism	177
	The temporal imperative: Roman theology and politics fused	182
	Radical Jansenism 1770s–1790s	189
6	The 'public sphere' and the hidden life of ideas	201
	The hidden life of ideas	201
	The 'public sphere' and the top-down model of intellectual change	204
	Anachronism and toleration	215
	Appendix: Indicative bibliography of Protestant thought on natural religion	222
	Selected bibliography	225
	Index	239